

DATE	MEDIA	Quote/Feature
5/21/12	Marketplace	Fariborz Ghadar was interviewed regarding regarding China's role in the U.S. economy. "If the industry is sensitive—whether it's ports, or whether it's defense-related, or it's telecom-related, etc.—you begin to see some kind of concern, either from a national security point of view, or 'Oh my god, the foreigners are coming, buying this, that, and the other.'" Ghadar said.
6/15/12	Women's Wear Daily	Fariborz Ghadar comments for article "Spain's Fashion Industry Bucks Up"- said Spain is likely to need at least another 100 billion euros to shore up its banks, but that the economy is "not in bad shape."
6/22/12	Central Penn Business Journal	Fariborz Ghadar comments on how the U.S. system does indeed have features that insulate banks considerably from the troubles of parent institutions overseas.
7/1/12	Harvard Business Review	Fariborz Ghadar writes an article about Why Life Science Needs its Own Silicon Valley. Human genomics won't reach its full potential unit it has a sizable industry cluster. But how to create one? And where?
8/1/12	Inside Supply Management	Fariborz Ghadar interviewed on The Changing Winds of Population Growth. Supply chain management needs flexibility as global demographics change and emerging counris expand their middle class.
8/14/12	MEED Magazine	Fariborz Ghadar interviewd for articles focusing on how the latest US-led sanctions are affecting Iran's economy as a whole and Iran's oil industry and its impact on the wider global oil market.
9/5/12	NPR's Marketplace	"Immediately, you think of documents going back and forth. But FedEx delivers components. If the equipment is not being used in Europe, then the components are not necessary. Everything slows down."
12/1/12	CNN Opinion	Fariborz Ghadar, contributed an op/ed about immigration policy. He writes, "Despite the election cycle rhetoric surrounding immigration, which would make it seem like the rest of the world is swarming across U.S. borders like ants to a picnic, gobbling up our resources, the reality is quite different." (Dispel the immigration myths)

DATE	MEDIA	Quote/Feature
3/22/13	Central Penn Business Journal	Fariborz Ghadar is quoted in an article on U.S. immigration policy: "A few years ago, Penn State professor and international consultant Fariborz Ghadar had a teaching assistant who hailed from India. The young man had a degree from Penn State's Smeal College of Business and 'knows IT inside and out,' Ghadar said. In the not-too-distant-past, seeking to stay in the US would have been a no-brainer. But Ghadar's assistant didn't want to fight for a scarce H-1B visa. Moreover, a job back home would give him more purchasing power. He eventually took an offer from Honeywell International Inc. to manage a call center in India." (Better U.S. immigration policy would help midstate, analysts say)
6/24/13	Minneapolis StarTribune	Fariborz Ghadar is quoted in an article on social policy in the U.S.: "Whether it's the war on terror or the recession or this or that, society then reacts to those periods, and change usually results," says Fariborz Ghadar, a global business scholar at the Center for Strategic and International Affairs. These days, he says, "the younger generation is getting more accepting, the pace of change is much faster, data is available to us more quickly, we're more plugged in to the world around us and it's all combining to allow people to develop their own opinions and be open to others'." (Column: Acceptance and pragmatism, American style)
6/24/13	FindLaw and the Associated Press	Other places Article was featured as well - (Acceptance and pragmatism, American style)
7/2/13	MSN Money	An article looking at the impact on immigration reform on key economic sectors quotes Fariborz Ghadar , the William A. Schreyer Professor of Global Management, Policies and Planning: "Transport companies such as FedEx, United Parcel Service and trucker Swift Transportation should also benefit because they suffer from a shortage of drivers, says Fariborz Ghadar, the director of the Center for Global Business Studies at Penn State's Smeal College of Business. Legalizing undocumented workers will help these companies, because their new legal status will allow these immigrants to more easily get driver's licenses and insurance." (Who wins if immigration reform passes?)
7/15/13	Oil & Gas Monitor	An article authored by Fariborz Ghadar talks about China's growing oil imports from the Middle East and the U.S.'s pursuit of self-sufficiency. "Although it is a source of ongoing debate—whether the United States given forecasts of self-sufficiency in oil and gas should reconsider its commitment (economically, politically, financially) to the region—one thing is clear: Iraq has emerged from the American-led invasion of 2003 as the No. 2 oil exporter in the region (behind Saudi Arabia), free of international sanctions against the Saddam Hussein regime." (A China Syndrome?)
July 26-August 1	MEED: Special Report Iran	Iran Awaits its new President: Fariborz Ghadar is quoted in an article which talks about Iran following the presidential election. A look at how Iranian politics might change under the leadership of Rouhani and how it will affect Iran's role in the region with regards to Syria/Hezbollah and Iraq and whether it could change Tehran's approach to the nuclear negotiations.
10/15/13	CNN Opinion	Iran nuclear talks: Why there's room to strike a deal ~This week Iran and world powers finally commence long-delayed nuclear negotiations in Geneva. Was it a coincidence that just a few days ago, Barack Obama and Iranian President Hassan Rouhani engaged in a monumental 15-minute phone call and reopened a line of communication that has been closed for more than thirty years?
10/17/13	VOA.News.com	Persian TV station- Interviewed FG on the budget and debt level issues.